There’s a lot of white at play in clinics. But it seems like we still can’t have enough. So what is with the color white I want to know?

That previous line almost plays out in my head like lyrics to a song. But that’s what I am asking Ranjit Prasad, the Principal Architect of Splyce. We know the obvious, white is the embodiment of cleanliness, of health and hygiene, the spick-and-span-germ-free hue, the sign that there is nothing sinister, however small in size, lurking, an RGB version of what you see is what you really get.

White has always been symbolic of purity and of freshness but Ranjit will tell you that despite white being a de facto color of use in the healthcare industry, white makes a massive design statement and its use has desired effects. White has the ability to expand the sense of space, and alter the experience of shapes. Though easy on the eye, it still needs utmost care, and this care is transformed into the assimilation of attributes of luxury. White is also quite relaxing and nourishing.

“Choosing the right white in itself is a job. There are unbelievable choices of white available to pick from.”

White really brings out the accents and suddenly accents get an elevated status. The warmth of wood or gold trimmings, they all finally get maximum exposure. White also brings artificial light sources into play, and the impact of the color of the light gets magnified. White helps natural light seeping in to get a magnificent glow. So much more can be done with finishes when coupled with white. I also like how white accentuates minute details and curves, thus allowing the care, thought, and stand out details of our design to be really seen and experienced.

And suddenly I remember the importance of the color white, the understated king, the one that all colors unite to become. I remember that Krzysztof Kieslowski film, the one that imitates life, the one that is filled with humor, is called, White.
