Are you running with the ‘in’ crowd?

By Sally McKenzie, CEO

As the saying goes, birds of a feather flock together. Understandably, it’s common for those with like interests, backgrounds and experiences to form friendships and alliances. Yet, what may seem like staff camaraderie on the surface can be the root of practice factions, otherwise known as cliques.

It’s not uncommon to see divisions between clinical and business staff, between a group of “favored” employees and the rest of the workers or between the longtime personnel and the new recruits. Regardless of the makeup, staff cliques can be a powerful undertow in your practice manifesting in poor morale, ongoing conflict and increased staff turnover, all of which compromise practice productivity and profitability.

Take the case of Liz, Ellen and Tom. They’ve been with the clinician since day one. They feel that because of their seniority in the practice they run the show, and that would be how the rest of the team sees it as well. The dentist doesn’t make a change unless those three are on board.

Liz, Ellen and Tom lunch together, have coffee together, socialize together and think nothing of the message of exclusion they send to the other employees, who, by the way, turn over regularly. They justify their failure to include new employees because the chances that the latest recruit will stick around for more than a year are slim to none. Gee, I wonder why.

In staff meetings, which are few because Liz, Ellen and Tom pull the dentist aside whenever they feel something needs to be addressed and new employees are seldom asked for input. The new employees tend to fall into the role of spectators, merely watching the dentist and the trio banter the issues about. If they do speak up, their ideas are greeted coolly. Unless the threesome comes up with the concept, it’s likely someone else’s slightly different approach will interfere with the way they like to do things, which, they argue, seems to be working just fine. And it is, at least for the three of them.

The dentist, well she’s a really nice person and although she acknowledges that Liz, Ellen and Tom “aren’t perfect,” she doesn’t want to confront the issue. She prefers to just look the other way; telling herself there is really nothing she can do about it anyway.

Certainly, strong relationships among longtime employees can be tremendously beneficial for practices that rely on small cohesive teams. Moreover, naturally, where there is commonality among employees, alliances and friendships are likely to result. You may have assistants who form strong bonds because of their professional backgrounds or team members who form social connections because a group of them enjoys watching a particular television show or others who like certain activities or hobbies. However, where ties form among those with common interests, so too can divisions between the group on the “inside” and everyone else on the “outside.”

Cliques can be extremely counterproductive, and consequently, expensive. These non-productive units of exclusion reject key players, making it impossible to establish a true team that works effectively together. The problem becomes particularly serious if critical practice decisions are being made without input from those who are not part of the clique or if essential information is not shared with those who need that information to effectively carry out their job responsibilities and duties or if the treatment of some staff is noticeably different than the treatment of other staff.

Teams, not cliques, make the dental practice successful. While personalities, work styles and interests may differ, each member of the staff needs to be given the opportunity to contribute fully.

As leaders, dentists set the example for the team and can unwittingly strengthen cliques. For example, allowing a few to monopolize the conversation in staff meetings rather than insisting on input from every team member can send the message to those who keep quiet that their input either isn’t welcome or has a lower value than the “chosen” participants. Sharing personal information with a select few members of the team conveys to the rest that the favored few have the ear of the dentist. Socializing with certain members of the staff outside of the ‘in’ crowd can exclude those on the ‘outside.’

By Sally McKenzie, CEO
LVI can show you how to stay ahead of the curve empower

YOUR PRACTICE
your business

IN YOUR FUTURE WITH CONTINUED EDUCATION
Discover a path that leads your practice to greater competitive power in the current marketplace. LVI will teach you techniques and procedures that will dramatically enhance the lives of you and your patients.

11 HRS OF CE CREDITS & COURSE INFORMATION
- Identify appropriate procedures for smile design and when to use them.
- Define the options for porcelain restorations and the preparation and temporization necessary to accomplish the realization.
- Implement better communication techniques and more efficient administering of anesthetics for the patient.
- Understand the best procedures for diagnosis and treatment planning and better communication with the patient.
- Discuss the parameters for use of transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulation.
- Define the four categories of marketing.

$100 OFF TUITION AT AN LVI REGIONAL EVENT
With events throughout the nation and $100 off your tuition when you register before the event, LVI makes it easy and affordable for you to continue your dental education.

register
UPCOMING 2011 EVENTS

VISIT WWW.LVIREGIONALEVENTS.COM OR CALL 888.584.3237

LVI Regional Event
SPONSORED BY MICRODENTAL

ADA CERP Continuing Education Recognition Program

(CE credits are not provided by ADA. ADA acceptance of CE credits is at the sole discretion of the individual state board of dentistry, dental association, or other credentialing group requiring completion of CE credits. The relationship of this credit to the requirement of other states and foreign countries is unknown. Specific information regarding acceptance should be obtained from the state in which the dentist practices or the foreign country.)
A sunny ‘Gateway to Good Health’

The Florida National Dental Convention (FNDC) will be held June 9–11 at the Gaylord Palms Resort & Convention Center in Orlando. FNDC2011 boosts a strong slate of speakers focusing on the dentist’s role in a patient’s health.

Dr. Duke Aldridge will lead a two-day intensive mini-residencies in endodontics and implants. In addition, the year’s speakers and course offerings will challenge you as you build your expertise in endodontic procedures as well as the latest techniques.

At FNDC2011 you will find the traditional half-day lecture courses as well as hands-on workshops and the highly sought after mini-residencies. This year is offering mini-residencies in endodontics and implants.

Dr. Sally McKenzie is CEO of McKenzie Management, which provides success-proven management solutions to dental practitioners nationwide. She is also editor of The Dentist’s Network newsletter at www.thedentistsnetwork.net; the e-Management Newsletter from www.mckenzie mgm.com; and The New Dentist* magazine, www.thenewdentists.org. She can be reached at (877) 777-6151 or sallymck@mckenzie mgm.com.

Cove and Universal Orlando. Most attractions are located within several minutes from Gaylord Palms. Complimentary scheduled shuttle bus service is available from the hotel to the Disney theme parks, Shuttle to SeaWorld, Universal Orlando and Wet-n-Wild are available through the Hotel Concierge.

For special theme park tickets and information on other area attractions, go to the general information menu and choose the area attractions option on the following website, www.florida dentalconvention.com.

There is no better place to get your C.E credits and network with your peers than at FNDC2011. Visit www.florida dentalconvention.com to see the full schedule of events and to register to attend.

The Gaylord Palms Resort and Convention Center. (Photos/FLDA)