A t prime minister’s questions on March 26, Conservative MP and dentist Sir Paul Beresford asked Gordon Brown to confirm that he agreed with the need for fluoridation, and would he meet a delegation to discuss the changes needed to implement it.

The prime minister replied that he was personally very sympathetic to what Sir Paul had said and had seen the benefits of fluoridation himself. One reason for the Government putting extra money from the health budget into fluoridation was to encourage that to happen around the country. He added that he would be very happy to meet the proposed delegation. ‘It is a good thing for the teeth of the people of this country’ said the prime minister.

A friendly labour back-bencher and fellow Devon MP, Linda Gilroy asked the minister to join her in congratulating Plymouth PCT, which a short time ago had 12,000 patients on its waiting list, but had turned things around and now had about 500 patients on it. The minister was happy to do this and also congratulated his own PCT (Exeter), which had halved the number of people on its waiting list in the past 12 months.

However the conservative shadow dentistry minister, Mike Penning, attacked the minister for denying that there was a crisis in NHS dentistry, despite the evidence in the recent Patients Association report. ‘Whom should we believe?’ he asked, ‘the Government or the Patients Association’. The minister said he would rather listen to the testimony of MPs, speaking from experience of their constituency, and to the facts.

‘Given the introduction of the new contract, and the new investment that is now coming on stream in dentistry, I am afraid I have to tell the hon. Gentleman that not much longer will he be able to say in the House that NHS dentistry is in crisis’, he concluded.

Westminster week
Prime Minister backs water fluoridation

Health questions
Philip Hollobone conservative MP for Kettering had an oral question down for health ministers last month. He wanted a statement on access to NHS dentistry in both his constituency and England. The reply was given by the minister of state, Ben Bradshaw, who said that there had been an increase of seven percent in the number of dentists in Northamptonshire last year; nationally there were 4,000 more dentists than in 1997, and investment in NHS dentistry has more than doubled.

Mr Hollobone pointed out, however, that according to the latest figures the number of patients in Northamptonshire seen by their dentist has fallen by 13,000 since the new dental contracts were introduced. He also pointed out that Northamptonshire primary care trust (PCT) had yet to undertake a needs assessment of children’s orthodontics. The minister urged the PCT to get on and do it. He also said there was now a requirement for all PCTs to increase, year on year, public access to NHS dentists. ‘There is no excuse for any PCT, including the hon. Gentleman’s, to not improve its results’, he said.

A friendly labour back-bencher and fellow Devon MP, Linda Gilroy asked the minister to join her in congratulating Plymouth PCT, which a short time ago had 12,000 patients on its waiting list, but had turned things around and now had about 500 patients on it. The minister was happy to do this and also congratulated his own PCT (Exeter), which had halved the number of people on its waiting list in the past 12 months.

However the conservative shadow dentistry minister, Mike Penning, attacked the minister for denying that there was a crisis in NHS dentistry, despite the evidence in the recent Patients Association report. ‘Whom should we believe?’ he asked, ‘the Government or the Patients Association’. The minister said he would rather listen to the testimony of MPs, speaking from experience of their constituency, and to the facts.

‘Given the introduction of the new contract, and the new investment that is now coming on stream in dentistry, I am afraid I have to tell the hon. Gentleman that not much longer will he be able to say in the House that NHS dentistry is in crisis’, he concluded.

Clearly different
...it’s amazing!

Introductory Seminars
At the first event in the Clearstep Educational Continuum, all introductory seminars is aimed primarily at General Dental Practitioners whatever your expertise and experience.

By the end of the programme you will understand the benefits of combined treatment plan and feel confident about treating any patient with the Clearstep system together with traditional orthodontic techniques.

Expand your range of treatments and further your skills. Book onto the Clearstep Introductory seminar today.

BOOK ON-LINE FOR THE INTRODUCTORY SEMINARS:
www.clearstep.co.uk or contact info@clearstep.co.uk

My patients keep asking me for an invisible, comfortable way to straighten their teeth. I found the answer. My patients love the treatment and so too will yours.

Dr Andrew McCann D.M.S., F.D.S., R.C.S. Eng., R.C.S. Edin., F.R.C.S. Eng., R.C.S. (Ireland), D.M.S., Orthodontics, M.S., Orthodontics

Clearstep Orthodontics & Aesthetics

To find out more, please call or email:

Tel: 0345 3370191
Email: info@clearstep.co.uk

www.clearstep.co.uk