A vetting scheme for all dental professionals changing jobs or starting work for the first time has been put under review by the new government.

The Vetting and Barring scheme, aimed at protecting children and vulnerable adults, has been criticised by many as disproportionate, overly burdensome and unduly infringing on civil liberties.

It was announced last year that from July 2010, any dental professionals who were changing jobs or starting work for the first time would need to register with the Independent Safeguarding Authority (ISA) and that by 2015 all dental professionals would need to be registered with the Vetting and Barring scheme. However, registration with the scheme has been postponed.

Vetting and barring scheme under review

Home Secretary withdraws scheme pending a ‘fundamental remodelling’; dental groups ‘wait with interest’

A vetting scheme for all dental professionals changing jobs or starting work for the first time has been put under review by the new government.

The Vetting and Barring scheme, aimed at protecting children and vulnerable adults, has been criticised by many as disproportionate, overly burdensome and unduly infringing on civil liberties.

It was announced last year that from July 2010, any dental professionals who were changing jobs or starting work for the first time would need to register with the Independent Safeguarding Authority (ISA) and that by 2015 all dental professionals would need to be registered with the Vetting and Barring scheme. However, registration with the scheme has been postponed.

Vetting and barring scheme under review

Home Secretary withdraws scheme pending a ‘fundamental remodelling’; dental groups ‘wait with interest’

A vetting scheme for all dental professionals changing jobs or starting work for the first time has been put under review by the new government.

The Vetting and Barring scheme, aimed at protecting children and vulnerable adults, has been criticised by many as disproportionate, overly burdensome and unduly infringing on civil liberties.

It was announced last year that from July 2010, any dental professionals who were changing jobs or starting work for the first time would need to register with the Independent Safeguarding Authority (ISA) and that by 2015 all dental professionals would need to be registered with the Vetting and Barring scheme. However, registration with the scheme has been postponed.

Vetting and barring scheme under review

Home Secretary withdraws scheme pending a ‘fundamental remodelling’; dental groups ‘wait with interest’

A vetting scheme for all dental professionals changing jobs or starting work for the first time has been put under review by the new government.

The Vetting and Barring scheme, aimed at protecting children and vulnerable adults, has been criticised by many as disproportionate, overly burdensome and unduly infringing on civil liberties.

It was announced last year that from July 2010, any dental professionals who were changing jobs or starting work for the first time would need to register with the Independent Safeguarding Authority (ISA) and that by 2015 all dental professionals would need to be registered with the Vetting and Barring scheme. However, registration with the scheme has been postponed.

Vetting and barring scheme under review

Home Secretary withdraws scheme pending a ‘fundamental remodelling’; dental groups ‘wait with interest’

A vetting scheme for all dental professionals changing jobs or starting work for the first time has been put under review by the new government.

The Vetting and Barring scheme, aimed at protecting children and vulnerable adults, has been criticised by many as disproportionate, overly burdensome and unduly infringing on civil liberties.

It was announced last year that from July 2010, any dental professionals who were changing jobs or starting work for the first time would need to register with the Independent Safeguarding Authority (ISA) and that by 2015 all dental professionals would need to be registered with the Vetting and Barring scheme. However, registration with the scheme has been postponed.