Success for Nuview at WAC 2010

The World Aesthetic Congress (WAC) 2010 was a unique opportunity for dental professionals to learn from leading experts within the expanding field of aesthetic dentistry.

Nuview enjoyed great success at this year’s event, displaying its outstanding range of loupes, magnification and illumination solutions, along with its Continuum Distraction System.

Delegates were able to witness first-hand the wonders of the Carl Zeiss OPMI Pico microscope, which provides a combination of superior visualization and ergonomics throughout every procedure.

In addition to microscopes, delegates were also able to experience the Carl Zeiss Eyepiece Pro and Eyepiece Lino, manufactured in Germany. Nuview’s Continuum Distraction system was also on display. It has been proven to significantly reduce microbial presence by up to 98%, while having a 99.996% kill rate contributed by a residual effect. As a result of being alcohol free, this range is kinder to site, equipment and surfaces. Delegates left the Nuview confident in the knowledge that as a Nuview client, you are guaranteed the best.

51.3% of adults ignore oral health advice

Despite the Department of Health’s toolkit for prevention Delivering better oral health, several studies and other recent oral hygiene advice that patients should ‘spit - not rinse’ it seems the message is not getting through. A recent survey undertaken by the BDS shows that 51.3 per cent of adults admitted to rinsing with mouthwash after toothbrushing will negate the positive effect of fluoride in the mouth and speed decay away.

The scenario changes however if a mouthwash containing fluoride is used as a rinse instead of water. In fact, a recent blinded, randomized study has shown that 100 ppm mouthwash, such as Listerine, even when used immediately after brushing, maintains the fluoride levels obtained from a fluridise toothpaste.
