Fluoridation rage gains momentum

Southampton City councilors are fighting fluoridation

Andrew Mortimore, public health director at Southampton City Primary Care Trust, said: ‘We hope that local people take confidence from the decision taken by the city council to back the proposals. We hope also that even more Southampton residents will now express their support for the proposals for fluoridation currently being consulted on by South Central Strategic Health Authority.’

He added: ‘We are delighted by the fact that elected councilors who represent Southampton, which makes up the majority of those who would benefit from fluoridated water in the proposed scheme, have decided to support water-fluoridation. We appreciate the thoroughness with which the issues were examined and believe this is an example of local democracy at its best.’

However, Hampshire councilors vetoed the plan, just hours after Southampton councilors had given it their backing.

Hampshire County Council decided unanimously that it did not support the proposals.

Councillor Ken Thornber, leader of Hampshire County Council, said: ‘The Southampton City Primary Care Trust wants to improve the oral health of specific communities in Southampton, but their proposals will impact on people in south-west Hampshire which does not have the same problems of poor dental health.

There may be some benefit to some children living in the affected area, but there is also a strong possibility that children with otherwise healthy teeth may develop a degree of fluorosis.’

He expressed concern that ‘it is not fully understood if there are other health effects to a population that has fluoride added to drinking water’.

Leo Leys, dental advisor to UK Councils Against Fluoridation (UKAF) welcomed the decision to reject the proposal and said: ‘I believe this is a stunning victory for commonsense. The council committee has been extremely thorough in its demolition of the pro water fluoridation evidence.

Two peers, Lord Hunt and Baroness Cumberlege, have added their voices to the debate by joining with Southampton City councillors in throwing their support behind the scheme.

Lord Hunt of King’s Heath said: ‘As a former health minister and chief executive of the National Association of Health Authorities and Trusts, I have no doubts about the efficacy and safety of water fluoridation.’

Hundreds of millions of people around the world are currently benefiting from this public health measure, which for the past 60 years has saved many millions of teeth from decay, from fillings and from needing to be extracted.’

He added: ‘The degree of human discomfort and pain that has been avoided is almost incalculable.’

Commenting on the public consultation being run by South Central Strategic Health Authority (SHA), Lord Hunt said: ‘Rightly, fluoridation is a matter for local decision following public consultation. My family and I are fortunate to live in Birmingham, where the water has been fluoridated for 45 years. From my personal experience, I would strongly commend fluoridation to the people of Southampton.’

Baroness Cumberlege claims that during more than 20 years of involvement in health issues she has seen ‘few public health measures as measurably successful as fluoridation’.

Pre-sterilised at no extra cost

Use straight from blister pack: Added convenience, save time and costs

Stainless steel brands: Coloriinox K-Flexoflise, Nedrotome & K-Flexoremasse

Nickel-Titanium brands: ProTaper Universal Rotary Files & ProFile Rotary Files

Other accessories also available sterile.

Contact us to find out more.
Fluoridation rage gains momentum

She pointed to reports by the Royal College of Physicians in 1976, the University of York in 2000, the US Task Force on Community Preventive Services in 2002 and the Australian National Health and Medical Research Council in 2007 that found evidence that fluoridation reduces tooth decay.

Commenting on concerns posed by anti-fluoride campaign groups over the safety of water fluoridation, Lord Hunt said: ‘When the debate about whether or not to fluoridate Birmingham’s water was taking place in the early 1960s, there were dire predictions from anti-fluoridation campaign groups that people would be seriously harmed, that teeth would turn brown and that no teeth would be saved from decay. However, he claimed none of these ‘scare stories’ actually came to pass in reality.

The public consultation, on whether to add fluoride to water in parts of Southampton and South West Hampshire, will close on Friday 19 December.

The message we’re putting out there is that we’re keeping everyone and anyone. We are getting patients in all of the time,’ he said.

The practice has been established for more than 40 years and was taken over by Dr Quraishi in January.

He has already spent about £170,000 on renovating the practice – which offers NHS and private treatment – and installing new equipment. At least another £100,000 has been earmarked for further improvements.

Two new surgeries have been fitted and another is planned next year.

The waiting area and reception is to be renovated, disabled access is being improved and a centre sterilisation room created.

The practice has three dentists and a hygienist and five nurses. The practice is open six days a week and some evenings.

Empty rooms ‘a crying shame’

St Austell MP Matthew Taylor, said: ‘The doctors in Roche and myself are goshmacked that the investment has been put in for a new dentist facility but it isn’t being used. It is clear that there is a desperate need but the PCT is now saying that it won’t fund it.’

This simply suggests that NHS dentistry just isn’t being backed because everybody knows it isn’t possible to get an NHS dentist anywhere in the area, but here are rooms lying empty with all the expensive facilities ready. From the government down to the PCT there needs to be a clear determination to sort out NHS dental services and there is nowhere better to start than to fill those expensive equipped rooms.’

Cornwall and Isles of Scilly PCT say no one can be treated in the rooms until April next year.

Credit crunch hits ADP

The credit crunch has forced the company ADP to cancel its plans to run a new NHS dental surgery in Tunbridge in Kent.

NHS West Kent, the regional primary care trust (PCT), revealed back in June that a new £500,000 deal had been signed with ADP to provide dental care to 6,000 patients in the town.

However the PCT has now revealed that the company has been forced to pull out.

A spokesperson for the PCT, said it was ‘clearly disappointed’ that the company had withdrawn and that staff were doing ‘everything possible’ to help affected patients.

He added: ‘As soon as NHS West Kent became aware of this potential issue we took steps to alleviate the inconvenience that this will cause.’

The PCT has temporarily awarded contracts to a range of local dentists in the short term to ensure patients have access to treatment while the formal tendering process is completed.

That process will now begin again next month and the PCT hopes a successful bidder will be selected by June next year.

Scottish dental access crisis

MPs are calling on the Scottish Health Secretary to deal with the lack of NHS dentists in Scotland.

Orkney, Grampian and Caithness have the lowest level of NHS dental cover, according to MSPs.

Orkney MSP Liam McArthur claims that the situation on the islands had reached crisis level.

Dental Tribune moves ‘leaps and bounds’

Dental professionals from small practices are choosing to read Dental Tribune, over any other dental publication according to a recent survey by the British Dental Trade Association (BDTA).

The Dentist Readership Survey by the BDTA, found that a total of 66 per cent of DT readers are from small practices and half of the dental professionals who read Dental Tribune (DT) say they read it regularly.

While 57 per cent of DT readers look at the news first.

More than half of DT’s readers are aged between 55 and 44.

This makes DT, the second preferred choice for people in this age group.

Penny Palmer, editor of DTUK said: ‘We have only been in the market for two years and are already moving leaps and bounds compared to other stalls/waists in the market that have been around for years.’

The survey found that BDJ and BDA News are the dental publications that attract the highest number of readers.

A total of 96 per cent of dental professionals believe that dental publications enable them to keep abreast of what is happening in the dental industry. While 77 per cent read dental publications to gain information on the newest techniques.

The Dentist Readerhip Survey also reveals that 64 per cent of dental professionals who read Dental Tribune (DT) are deciding not to set up a practice in the surgery.

Peter Knibbs, director of primary care at the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Primary Care Trust, said: ‘Dentists are free to choose where they practice as either NHS or private dentists.

He added: ‘Following this decision, the two rooms identified for a dental surgery have since been used by the practice for other NHS care.’

‘The more the merrier’ say Sunderland dentists

Dentists in Sunderland are welcoming the increase in patients and are even saying ‘the more the merrier’.

While Dr Ash Quraishi, principal dentist and clinical adviser at West Mount dental practice, is even saying: ‘the more the merrier’.

The practice has three dentists and a hygienist and five nurses. The practice is open six days a week and some evenings.

The practice is ‘leaps and bounds’ ahead compared to 2007, when the rooms were empty.

Cornwall PCT is paying rent on two empty dentist rooms.

Cornwall PCT say no one can be treated in the rooms until April next year.

The Dentist Readerhip Survey also reveals that 64 per cent of dental professionals who read Dental Tribune (DT) are deciding not to set up a practice in the surgery.

Peter Knibbs, director of primary care at the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Primary Care Trust, said: ‘Dentists are free to choose where they practice as either NHS or private dentists.

He added: ‘Following this decision, the two rooms identified for a dental surgery have since been used by the practice for other NHS care.’

The practice manager at the health centre, Judith Kurth said: ‘The doctors in Roche and myself are goshmacked that the investment has been put in for a new dentist facility but it isn’t being used. It is clear that there is a desperate need but the PCT is now saying that it won’t fund it.’

This simply suggests that NHS dentistry just isn’t being backed because everybody knows it isn’t possible to get an NHS dentist anywhere in the area, but here are rooms lying empty with all the expensive facilities ready. From the government down to the PCT there needs to be a clear determination to sort out NHS dental services and there is nowhere better to start than to fill those expensive equipped rooms.’

Cornwall and Isles of Scilly PCT say no one can be treated in the rooms until April next year.