Corodent
Amongst the UK population the number one reason for choosing a mouthwash for fresh breath is: fresh breath! Corodent Daily Defence Mouthwash helps prevent plaque and tartar build-up at the gum-line, a new research study has shown. Corodent Daily Defence Mouthwash is a daily use mouthwash containing 250 ppm fluoride, to help ward off plaque and prevent tooth decay, plus a unique 50 ppm chlorhexidine digluconate to help maintain healthy gums. This study has shown that 87% of the patients who use Corodent mouthwash in addition to an effective brushing technique experience a “marked” improvement in fresh breath. Corodent Daily Defence Mouthwash in addition to toothbrushing was shown to result in up to 3.5 times greater plaque reduction than brushing alone.

Richard Medley-Dixon, Export Marketing Manager, GlaxoSmithKline Consumer Healthcare comments: “We know that patients are concerned about their fresh breath and this is the main reason for choosing a mouthwash, yet only 50% of patients use mouthwash in addition to brushing. So, the challenge is getting patients to use mouthwash in addition to an effective brushing technique, and this new research confirms that Corodent Daily Defence Mouthwash is the leading cause of bad breath it is the chosen mouthwash helps to manage plaque. Corodent Daily Defence Mouthwash contains both chlorhexidine digluconate and fluoride and is designed to help patients maintain healthy gums and mouth on a daily basis.”
