Talking Points – another year of success for dental education

Talking Points in Dentistry, GlaxoSmithKline Consumer Healthcare’s (GSK) popular lecture programme, was a tremendous success this year, with over 5,000 dental healthcare professionals attending across 9 UK venues to listen to this year’s speakers, Amanda Gallie and Mark Hill.

In his lecture, “What’s the problem in Oral Health Assessment?”, Mark talked about the new dental contract, Oral Health Assessment. He explained that for a universally used and understood assessment tool for tooth wear; Amanda Gallie’s lecture, “Make Back Teeth Count”, focused on the importance of effective patient communication in practice, and different ways in which this can be achieved. The lecture focussed on the different types of motivational interviewing.

If you missed this year’s Talking Points, more information on the lectures will be available online from the end of June at www.gsk-dentalprofessionals.co.uk, along with videos of the talks.

Don’t forget to visit www.gsk-dentalprofessionals.co.uk for details of next year’s event and to book your tickets in good time!
