The Evidence says it all

Effective daily oral care at home can help maintain a healthy mouth and reduce the onset of oral diseases.

Most dental professionals agree that now more than ever, patients have an optimum daily oral care regimen in place, with the aim of maintaining optimal oral hygiene and reducing plaque, so that patients can maximise the beneficial effects of twice daily toothbrushing. Colgate Total is designed to develop services to help support dental professionals in their clinical practice, and the brand of toothpaste used most often by UK dental professionals. Colgate Total, first launched in 1953, removes the only toothpaste that has been proven to deliver sustained antibacterial protection for 12 hours. The unique formula of triclosan and copolymer is more effective than fluoride toothpaste in reducing plaque, so patients can benefit from the maximum oral hygiene that can be achieved with a single toothpaste. The evidence demonstrates the integration of best evidence, clinical judgement and patient values and circumstances. There are many levels of funded and unfunded information which determine the quality and strength of the evidence. The strength of evidence found within the Department of Health guidance document "Delivering Better Oral Health: demonstration-based tool for prevention" ranges from level 1 evidence, 'evidence of randomized controlled trials', to level 6 evidence, 'opinion, expert consensus, or clinical experience' (National Institute of Clinical Excellence).
