Local rules for local PCTs mean care is needed when designing Local Decontamination Units

Regional differences in the implementation of HTM01-05 guidelines make it vital for dentists to seek expert advice when redesigning their practices, says Roger Gullidge of Roger Gullidge Design.

“At the heart of the issue is that HTM01-05 is written. Like many official and bureaucratic documents, it is complicated and difficult to understand. Dentists have interpreted passages of the document in different ways and enforced it accordingly,” says Roger Gullidge Design.

Factors such as ventilation within decontamination units can be especially complicated. Taking advice from local PCTs and expert equipment suppliers is essential when designing the layout of the units, he adds.

“All guidelines are put in place to protect patients,” says Roger Gullidge. “The process of achieving that protection can be far smoother if you use expert advice at the right time.” Roger Gullidge Design is a specialist design and production management consultancy specializing in the dental sector. Drill-free dentistry introduced in Colchester

National firm Dentist Direct has launched its first new office style practice which aims to stamp out fear of drilling and injections among dental patients.

Dentist Direct’s first practice now has officially opened in Colchester, with Principal Dr Neel Sanghavi, allowing patients to be treated with revolutionary laser technology which can be used instead of drills and needles for almost any dental procedure and which – in most cases – is completely painless.

This technology, known as the Waterlase Plus works by focusing laser energy with a gentle stream of water, reducing pain, anxiety and trauma for patients and instead creating a more comfortable experience with less risk of complications. Principal dentist Dr Neel Sanghavi said: “I think it’s a brilliant concept for dentists like myself who want to grow their clinical skills and concentrate on caring for their patients rather than spending time worrying about the business and compliance side of things.”
