Don’t Just Drift into a Briach

Many NHS dentists at this time of the year already know that they will be unable to deliver UDAs within the four per cent tolerance would do well to consider approaching the PCT for a temporary UDA target reduction! warns special dental solicitor Alexander Hall of Hall, King LLP. “In recent years becoming increasingly aggressive in seizing breach and we believe that the PCTs should at least take the four per cent into account. The first strike in the two strikes and you're out scenario is becoming common. Some potential buyers are more hesitant to buy in such circumstances. “Rather than pay out funds simply to recover them later by clawback for underperformance, PCTs should prefer to approach this as there is sufficient time in the year left to redistribute the funds to contractors who need them, have delivered their UDAs for the year and could deliver more. “It is not hard to imagine that the contractor has a genuine reason for the current underperformance, that reason is not one of will and will not cause on-going problems, otherwise PCTs may be tempted to set a permanent target reduction.”
