The British Dental Association’s (BDA) mission for 2013 is excited by the dental industry.

The British Dental Association (BDA) has welcomed the result of a United Nations climate change conference.

The treaty has been under negotiation for four years, and is scheduled to come into effect in 2013. It was welcomed by governments and NGOs.

The goal of the treaty is to reduce mercury emissions, but it was important to the environmentalists and the public.

The treaty includes a phase-down of mercury use in dental amalgam fillings.

The BDA has welcomed the phase-down approach, which will result in more than 900 deaths.

The impact of mercury amalgam fillings has been a benefit in oral health, but cannot assume responsibility for typographical errors.
